SMALLPOX BREAKS OUT.

The Armenians at Zeitoun Will Now Get Relief—Death.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—The United States minister to Constantinople, Mr. Terrell, has advised Secretary Olney by cable that the inhabitants of the town of Zeitoun and vicinity are suffering from the ravages of smallpox and other diseases and are in want of food.

He says relief expeditions are fitting out as fast as possible but that progress is necessarily slow and uncertain because the valleys are deep in mud and almost impassable, while the mountains are filled with snow and the weather is unusually cold.

The British vice consul has sent relief to Harpoot and the sultan has issued an imperial decree forwarding protection and ordering other facilities for Miss Barton in her work of distributing relief.

Terrell Blames England.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 29.—United States Minister Terrell writes from Constantinople to his brother, Hon. J. C. Terrell of this city, as follows:

England has played her cards badly; all the massacres could have been avoided had her policy been different. Besides this, the American press and American congress in arousing the sultan and porte will destroy my influence here.

And then the poor missionaries whom I have now protected from the Black to the Caspian sea are continually writing back home abusing the sultan and porte, and their friends in the United States have the letters published and the papers containing them are sent to the government here immediately.

How can I any longer protect such people? If the Russian alliance is formed then the worst will be at hand.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS.

In the House.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—There was an enthusiastic demonstration in the house when Secretary Cox of the senate, shortly before 1 p. m., appeared and announced the passage by the upper branch of congress of the Cuban resolution, but the matter did not come up in any other form during the day. After encountering the unexpected opposition of Mr. Boutelle, the house leaders concluded to postpone taking up the resolution until the legislative bill was disposed of.

The whole day in the house was spent in the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill, and considerable progress was made.

An agreement was reached whereby the bill to change the compensation of United States attorneys and marshals from the fee to the salary system is to be offered as an amendment to this bill.

An amendment offered by Mr Fawney (Rep., Minn.), to provide that the members shall have $600 per month for clerk hire throughout the year, instead of during the sessions only, as is now the case, provoked the charge that it was a "salary grab." Mr. Payne (Rep., N. Y.), who was in the chair, ruled it out on a point of order. An attempt was made to overrule the chair, but he was sustained—102 to 42.

Mr. Bailey (Dem., Tex.) raised a point of order against the appropriation of $5,000 for the private secretary of the president. "The law," said Mr. Bailey, "fixes the salary of $1,500. The chair sustained the point and the salary was fixed at the lower figure.

When the committee rose the speaker laid before the house the president's veto of the bill to lease certain lands in Arizona for educational purposes. Mr. Lacey (Rep., Ia.) gave notice that he would call the veto message up today.

The conference report on the pension appropriation bill was agreed to.

Mr. Linton has prepared a resolution to prevent the placing of the statue in the Capitol, basing his protest on a law providing that only statues of citizens of the state furnishing them shall be placed there, and claiming that Father Marquette was not a citizen of Wisconsin.

SWEPT THE DONS.

Seven Hundred of Them Killed In One Engagement.

CUT DOWN WITH THE MACHETES.

Three Hundred Spanish Troops Enter Quatao and Murder In Cold Blood All the Noncombatants They Can Find, Among Them Small Boys, and Report a Great Spanish Victory.

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 29.—Friday's mail from Cuba brought three letters from and to different sources announcing outrages which are stated in the dispatch given below directed to Senator Morgan in Washington by Rafael Portuondo, Cuban secretary of state, who left for Washington Friday night:

"In Quatao, seven miles from the suburbs of Havana, on Saturday, Feb. 22, at 2:30, the insurgents retired from the town and at 6 o'clock 300 Spanish soldiers immediately entered, murdering noncombatants to the number of 22, among whom were some Spaniards, sick men, boys of 15 years and an old man of 72. The violation of young girls was prevented by protest of the Spanish residents.

"Fifteen insurgent noncombatants have been taken to Mariando for trial. This news has been confirmed by living witnesses who have just arrived from the scene of the butchery."

The details of the battle at Palo Prieto between Santa Clara and Placeta, about Feb. 20, have arrived. The result is considered more important than the battles of Peralejo Coliso or Lasececas. Serafin Sanchez commanded the Cubans and General Palanco the Spanish.

The outcome was the greatest triumph the Cubans ever had, the Spanish loss being 700. General Palanco was severely wounded and his horse is now in the possession of Quinton Bandera. In their flight many Spaniards threw themselves into the river.

The Spaniards attacked a small detachment of scouts, who soon overtook the main body, and after a short fight the fearful machete charge was made, prostrating hundreds of Spaniards beneath their terrific onslaught. The severe Spanish losses are attributed greatly to the panic which ensued when "charge with machete" was ordered.

Great enthusiasm prevails here among the Cubans over the announcement that the resolution to recognize them as belligerents was passed by the senate.

Nearly 118,000 Spaniards have been sent to Cuba and the cost of the rebellion has already amounted to £10,000,000 ($50,000,000), and for the second year it will exceed £15,000,000 ($75,000,000). Captain General Weyler says it will take at least two years to crush the rebellion.

Mrs. Tunnell, the woman who is so badly wanted as a witness, Miss Overman said, had been advised to keep out of the way at a conference held at Brown's house. Miss Overman, seeing the serious predicament of Dr. Brown, told him the whole story of the plot and her share in it.

YOST & PACKARD EXONERATED.

Their Connection With Wood County Courthouse Was Honorable.

BOWLING GREEN, O., Feb. 29.—About a year ago a lot of contractors and architects were indicted in connection with alleged jobbery in building the Wood county courthouse. Among them was Yost & Packard, architects, Columbus.

The case was recently called in court and the prosecuting attorney asked that the indictment against the Columbus firm be quashed, as the state had no case, and so the matter was disposed of. The charges were without foundation, as the courthouse is better than the contract called for.

The following letter from the prosecuting attorney of Wood county explains the whole matter:

BOWLING GREEN, O., Feb. 24.

Yost & Packard:

GENTLEMEN—Yours of recent date at hand and in reply would say: That you were indicted by the grand jury for the placing of the wrong kind of stone in the court house; that is, a different kind from that provided by the specifications. There was no evidence to warrant the finding of a bill against you, and I informed the grand jury at the time that if they found the bill I would probably have to nolle it, as you know I afterward had to do. The people of this county were very angry at that time because the court house was being built without a vote of the people, and they were ready to find an indictment against every person who had anything to do with the court house. I am perfectly willing to be quoted as saying that there never was, so far as I know, any evidence whatever of any crookedness on your part. I say to you frankly, that in my opinion, no matter who the architects of the court house might have been, they would have been indicted by that grand jury just the same. Hoping that the fact that a bill was found in this county may in no manner injure you in your business, I remain, very respectfully yours, A. B. MURPHY,
Prosecuting Attorney.

The following is a certified copy of the journal entry:

The State of Ohio versus J. W. Yost and Frank L. Packard.

Indictment for permitting use of material in public structure different from that required by the plans and specifications. Nolle prosequi is entered herein by order of court, at request of the prosecuting attorney.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

Want of Demand Retards Actual Improvement In Manufactures.

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—R. G. Dun & Company's weekly review of trade says: The want of sufficient demand for the products of great industries still retards actual improvement. Strikes of some importance in garment making and knitted lines affect trade in Chicago and Baltimore, but there are fewer labor difficulties than usual, as existing conditions warn wage earners that concessions at this time are unwise.

Wheat has advanced 3½ cents for cash and 2¾ cents for May. Cotton has been weaker with only fair receipts. The price of middling uplands has declined one sixteenth. The market for textile goods is disappointing. The mills are getting an average of about 6 per cent more for goods than a year ago, while paying 28 per cent more for cotton. Woolen mills are receiving considerable orders for spring goods, but the range for all woolens is scarcely 1 per cent higher than a year ago, although wool is more than 7 per cent higher.

The feature in iron has been the large demand for wrought and cast pipe at the lowest price ever known. Iron quiet as sweeps 2 per cent lower for the week because of the drop in Bessemer at Pittsburg to $12.50 and in gray forge to $10.75.

Failures for the week have been 278 in the United States against 250 last year, and 58 in Canada against 38 last year.

RAILROAD COMPANY ORGANIZED.

The Nypano Gets In Out of the Wet For Self-Protection.

But at Columbus there was incorporated the Nypano Railroad company, with Charles E. Whitehead, John Tod, E. R. Perkins, Alba Mark Tucker and John H. Dynes as incorporators, with $15,500,000 as its capital stock.

There will also be incorporated in Pennsylvania a new Nypano Railroad company, with a capital stock of $4,500,000. Then the Ohio company and the Pennsylvania company will consolidate with a capital stock of $20,000,000, which consolidated company will also be incorporated under the laws of Ohio.

This new consolidated Nypano Railroad company will then issue bonds to the extent of $20,000,000. The stock and bonds will be owned by the Erie Railroad company and will represent the supposed value of the Erie securities which the Erie is now giving to the old Nypano security holders in exchange for their stocks and bonds.

The face value of these Erie securities is about $25,000,000. The Nypano as thus organized will be leased to the Erie and operated by it the same as now. The consolidation of the Erie and the Nypano may be made later.

SOMETHING OF THE MAGNIFICENT HOTELS OF FLORIDA.

Notes of Winter Life in Sunny Clime with Special Reference to Marionite Who Are Sojourning There—Hotel Ponce de Leon and Tampa Bay Illustrated.

DAYTONA, FLA., Feb., 28.—In no place in the world are there finer hotels than in Florida. It may be honestly doubted if they are anywhere fully equaled A competent authority has said that the most favored hostelries of Europe suffer by comparison, and it is confessed that the famed resorts of California and the North do not favorably compare. Reference is made here particularly to the Hotel Ponce de Leon at St. Augustine and the Tampa Bay Hotel at Tampa. For the reader who has not seen these matchless monuments to the possibilities of great wealth in providing comfort for tourists, and for those who have not seen better illustrations than a newspaper can produce, cuts are presented beneath. Grandly magnificent, strikingly ornate in architecture, appealing to the eye as an agreeable diversion from the varied styles of architecture so generally employed, so thoroughly finished and sumptuously furnished, and above all so beautifully surrounded, any brief attempt at description must be so feeble that it is not worth the making. In the ecstacy of first impressions one dreams of the palaces of Spain, and sober contemplation carries one into an attempt to realize exaggerated magnificence. The Ponce is the chief monument of Henry M. Flagler, the Standard oil magnate who took a fancy to Florida and has himself built more than 300 miles of railway down the east coast and reared other great hotels and wrought seeming fairy lands out of the tangled forests; the other the Tampa Bay Hotel, is the creation of architects and artisans to the order of H. B. Plant, a railroad and steamship operator, who is the same factor in public benefaction and progress on the west coast of Florida that Mr Flagler on the east. Their works impressively indicate what progressively energetic men of means can do for a country and for themselves at the same time. Their plans must have been conceived on a broader scale than; immediate dividends contemplate, but there is proof that this broad policy has not been erroneous. Even in Ohio, with its boasted development, such men could bring a real transformation.

Of the hotels, to which this brief reference was to be confined it is often asked which is the finer. Who can say" Neither is like the other, or like any other—they have no kind. So unique in Moorish design, so sumptuous in furnishings and so complete in appointments and so individual in surroundings, theo are absolutely unique.

They have the advantage in appearance of being well built, not the frail or easily buroed frame structures of the North and West. The Ponce is of masonry made of cement and coquina rock the TampaBay is of brick and stone. The Ponce is exceptional in its Spanish surroundings, its courts, loggia, expansive parlors, costly paintings, matchless dining rooms and superb frescoing, the Tampa Bay is distiuct and alone with its extensive grounds, its crescent-topped minarets and domes, its broad galleries, its vast rotunda, its grand hallway—more than a furlough in length—and its princely parlor furnishings, with such interesting and costly pieces as sofa and chairs once owned by Marie Antoinette, chairs that belonged to King Louise Phillipan inlaid table that once belonged to Emperor Napoleon and other innovations that once graced the Tuileries and French and Japanese cabinets. But hold! Attempt at deserved description of either must end in failure.

At Indianola last Sunday, Cliff Kling and Ed Uhler had a call from Dr. Darwin Waugh, which proved a very agreeable event all around. They had not met since Dr. Waugh was a boy in Marion, nearly twenty years ago. Notwithstanding the many years since they were mere lads, and that the call was wholly a happy surprise, Mr. Uhler called the doctor by name as he entered the door, and the two were soon retailing the deviltry and pleasures of their early years. Dr. Waugh is now located in Brooklyn, and is spending a winter vacation at Rockledge. He is said to be a striking picture of his brilliant and popular father. His inquiries with reference to Marionites were numerous indeed.

Marion had the smallest representation on Merritt Island this winter that there has been known in six or eight years. The list has included Messrs Kling and Uhler at the Wallace cottage, Uncle John Owens and wife, Mrs Tage, Uncle John Owens and wife, Mrs Johnston and children and John D. Owens, at the Owens cottage, and Miss Ann Thompson, Miss Dessa Thompson, and Mrs. W. H. Krause, at the M Thompson home at Merritt. Mrs Thompson entertained a dinner company of Marionites early last week and afforded her guests a most delightful day.

Mrs Thompson, better remembered in Marion as Miss Alice Turney, is a leading spirit in an Indian River organization known as the Indian River Avilah. The name is not significant, for the word is coined from the initial letters of the organization's several departments. Its objects and plans, together with the dominating spirit, deserve extended notices. The constitution sets forth that the objects of the society are to promote the best interests of the Indian River country and its people, by bettering villages and highways, by establishing library and reading rooms, by advancing education, particularly in the line of art, and by procuring, compiling and filing the history of the river country Laudable indeed, and already results are evident in a library and reading room at Cocoa, a village of much less size than LaRue The ladies themselves say they wish to make things better for themselves and for the tourists on which the section largely depends. They want the visitor to find more than climate. They purpose preserving the Indian legends and early history, sure to be interesting The club itself is an interesting innovation. That the ladies should be foremost in both a historical and progressive work, in an organization confined wholly to themselves, is an agreeable thought, and is proof that woman can enlarge her sphere and can be useful, entertaining and entertained without rushing to the ballot box or raising a rumpus about woman's rights Success unbounded to the Avilah.

The experiment of ostrich farming is to be made on Merritt island. At Courtenay, five miles above Indianola, Mr H. J. Tillin has fourteen ostriches, brought from the Southern California farms, and will seek a profit from their plumage. It is stated that the experiment was once tried before on the mainland, and proved a failure, but it will not matter materially to Mr. Tiffin whether the venture is profitable or not If the birds do nothing more than apply their famed digestive powers on the cast-off condensed milk cans—that and the exhibition they afford will be sufficient to justify the attempts at "ostrich farming" So novel is the sight of these long-legged, long-necked, handsomely plumed birds that a regular naptha launch excursion line has been established between Rockledge and Courtenay.

The name of Rockledge suggests a reference to the astonishing expectations of many tourists. The tenderfoot comes down with rod and gun and expects to see yawping alligators at every turn of the path, looks for cottonmouth moccasins hanging from the limbs of every tree, and coiled diamondback rattlers drawn up for battle on every warm pile of sand, not to mention flocks of wild birds so thick that one is not expected to see the sun when the birds take wing The most improbable and impossible things are looked for. There are alligators, to be sure and snakes sufficient On one afternoon a pair of island hunters saw four big, deadly rattlers, and they had not been drinking, either. Mr. Moore, an island resident, killed a rattler at his kitchen door last fall, and one good woman, who shrinks from publicity, confesses to have turned from her household duties to behold a big, seven-foot blacksnake flopping and crawling through her kitchen. But the blacksnake is harmless A fair-sized one, said to be eight feet long, makes his home near Jalma Lapham's residence and the Laphams would not have him killed for anything. Snakes are not so thick that front yards have to be raked to permit children to play, and tourists come year after year without seeing anything harmful, and scores and scores of residents have never seen a live rattler except in captivity.

But this is digression—the big game seeker at Rockledge is accommodated A keen young man who is well up in trapping and has an eye for large cash receipts, conducts alligator hunts with astonishing good fortune, by locating and tying the 'gator in advance, directs fierce wild cat chases, and to guard against failure always captures the feline several days before, to await the run. And so it goes. The opulent sport is taken in and in his content enjoys it. Nevertheless, wild game is abundant. Deer, bear and wild cat are numerous, but not easily accessible to the tourist, unless he is content to roughing it in distant camps, away from the comforts of resorts.

A fraction of the Marion party this week came to Daytona, whose unchallenged claim to be the favorite cottage town of Florida is well grounded Facing the Halifax river, with the ocean only a half mile to the east, where the blue waves with silver crests roll along forty miles of the finest beach in the world and the never ending surf soothes the ear, where avenues an hundred feet wide and shaded with the great, moss-draped oaks, and roadways of marl afford finer drives and bicycle routes than any asphalt street of the north, and where superb cottages with every northern comfort line the route and with the passing throng comprise a panorama of highest civilization and pleasure—these make Daytona little less than ideal.

Mr. T. J. McMurray, wife and son and Miss Barnhart have a charming cottage in the very choicest block on famed Ridgewood avenue, and live with all the comforts of home, amid all the delights of semi-tropical surroundings and climate. There is pleasure in it that one must actually experience to fully understand. W. G. H.

EVENING WEAR.

Fur Bands and Sable Tails—Bodices of Velvet and Taffeta.

Bands of labrador and other fur, especially sable, are still much employed for the trimming of evening bodices They are arranged in epaulets and bretelles or border the decolletage In Paris sealskin and astrakhan coats have the high collar and revers lined with guipure or application d'Angleterre. It looks as if the popularity of fur were to extend through the summer, as it did a few years ago, when a close fur cape was the frequent accompaniment of summer gowns

A great deal of coral and rose colored velvet is being employed for the bodices of evening gowns Bodices of taffeta, with a pink flower design, are worn with white satin skirts

Sable tails decorate evening costumes and are considered especially attractive upon white or jade satins The decolletage is round or square, outlined with sable, while the sleeves are of tulle or mousseline de soie and are adorned with flowers

Evening mantles were never as luxurious as now They are made of the most magnificent materials, and although they are often in the form of long and short capes watteau shapes are the favorites The ermine lining forms revers and rascends of lace fall from the shoulders.

A great many blouses of liberty velvet are worn Rose and light green are the favorite colors

Ruches of various kinds are to be as popular during the spring and summer as they have been this winter.

White lace is now more fashionable than cream, yellow or ecru, and women who have put themselves to the trouble of tinting their laces may now undo their work.

Numerous rumors of a decrease in the size of sleeves continue to be made, but as yet there is no evidence of a change Possibly with the coming of summer styles a difference will be observed

The illustration given today shows an opera or ball wrap of brocade silk, violet on a white ground It is lined with white satin, stitched and wadded A rippled petticoat of violet velvet embroidered with gold covers the shoulders and forms a high valois collar, which is bordered with white ostrich tips A garland of white satin couches adorns the pelerine and the wrap is fastened by a bow of white satin with long ends. Always Moving.

"John," said a frightened wife in the middle of the night, "there is something moving around in the house"

"Don't you worry about it," replied John sleepily

"Oh, it's moving, but the gas meter is pegging away," he said with a sigh of relief.—Harlem Life

TWO CENTS A MILE

Will Be the Lawful Railroad Fare In This State

IF PENDING BILLS ARE PASSED.

Hon. J. Dwight Palmer, the Blind Member of the House Insuring Protection to Depositors In Other Than National Banks—Making County Auditors Good. A Question of Honest Clothing.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 29.—Special:—Blindness is a sad affliction, yet it does not seem to have rendered any the less cheerful or useful the gentleman whose features appear here For nearly 25 years the Hon. J. Dwight Palmer has suffered this affliction, yet he is as good-natured and happy a man as one will meet He is now serving his fourth term as a member of the house, representing Cuyahoga county, and in all the years that he has sat as a member he has been singularly diligent and attentive to the business of the house, listening to all that is said and often participating in the debates Tall, of powerful frame and speaking with a voice of great power and richness, he presents a striking figure when he rises to address his fellow members, and his arguments are notable for their clearness and force

HON. J. DWIGHT PALMER.

Mr. Palmer is midway of the 50s, a native of Connecticut but a resident of Cleveland since the age of 4 with the exception of four years spent in Michigan. During the war he served as major of the One Hundred and Fiftieth Ohio Volunteer infantry, and since his loss of sight has practiced as pension attorney. In early life he was a member of the city council of Cleveland.

For years efforts have been made to secure the passage of bills through the legislature limiting railroad fares to 2 cents a mile, but without success Time and again has the ground been gone over by the oratorical statesmen, but with each new set of legislators have appeared some who insisted upon going over it again. This year there are two forms of 2-cent-a-mile bills before the general assembly—one in the house, introduced by Mr. Walton, which provides for a straight 2-cent a mile fare, and one introduced in the senate by Mr Conley, which requires railroads to have on sale at all stations books calling for 100 miles of transportation, which shall be received in payment of the fare of as many persons as the holder of the ticket may stipulate.

The old arguments against bills of like character are again heard The railroads say that if they are compelled to carry anyone for 2 cents a mile they can not make special excursion rates for the public. They also insist that they would be unable to maintain the fine service and equipment that are now offered to travelers, and that the passage of a 2-cent bill would result in a retrogression to the old time cheaper methods of carrying passengers, when vestibules, palatial and comfortable coaches and gas and quick travel were unknown

Then it is argued that should such a material reduction in passenger rates be forced by legislation, it would be imperatively necessary to increase freight rates. A later phase is the presenting of petitions against the passage of the bills by railroad employes, who state that they would be the first to suffer from a diminution of rates, as all economies begin with them by way of wholesale discharges and reductions of salaries Hundreds of employes of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad have sent in these protests and the employes of other roads are preparing to do so

There is a prospect of the passage of the bill which provides for an interchange of commodities produced by the state institutions Lots of things are manufactured or raised at the various homes and asylums and penal establishments which can be exchanged and a good deal of money be saved The state does not make the best use of its resources in this matter The finance committee of the senate has recommended the passage of the bill and it will come up for action next week

Senator Laning is at work upon a bill which he intends shall, if enacted into a law, give a greater degree of protection to depositors in banks which are not national banks, and are not, therefore, subject to the scrutiny of the bank examiners of the federal government A bureau of banking is created, with the auditor of state as executive head Examiners are to be appointed who shall, whenever they deem proper, make, without any previous announcement, a descent upon a bank and investigate its condition and close it if it is not perfectly solvent. Of course, the bankers will object to such a measure, but think of how the depositors will say aye to any proposition to insure the safety of those with whom they intrust their money

Another bill which would seem to be a good thing is one which will shortly see the light of day, providing for a uniform system of keeping the accounts of county auditors and creating the office of traveling auditor, who shall periodically visit county auditors' offices and ascertain whether all is well Should this bill become a law, there will be an end to the scandalous shortages which have resulted in several auditors being landed in the penitentiary, while the taxpayers had to make up for losers.

A movement is on foot looking to the domestication in this state of Mongolian pheasants. It will take legal form when a bill which has been prepared is passed, which prohibits, for the period of five years, the killing of these handsome and wholesome fowls. The fish and game commission has taken an active part in the introduction of pheasants and is asking for a special appropriation for their protection

Ore clothing manufacturers are strenuously fighting two bills that are before the general assembly which affect their interests One is designed to do away with the so-called "sweat shop" system under which the large clothing men give out hand-me down suits to half-starved women to sew up and press for a pittance which barely enables the unfortunate workers, taking the work into their own homes, to keep body and soul together. It is a good thing for the manufacturers, because they are saved the expense of providing shop room for their workmen. They naturally enough protest in the strongest terms against the passage of this bill.

Then they object to a bill which requires that every suit of men's clothes shall have attached to it a label setting forth the amount of wool, of cotton and of shoddy in the cloth of which the suit is made Clothes do not wear like they used to, and it is because the pestilential manufacturers mix up shoddy and cotton with their wool in order to cheapen it and enable dealers to present what seem to be great bargains, but which are great frauds

A full and due proportion of honesty on the part of clothing men would work very greatly to the advantage of the men who buy clothes for what they seem to be, but which experience proves it to be not This world would really be a much nicer place to live in if everybody was honest The pure food law has done so much good for the people that a pure clothes law would appear to be a logical sequel

Citizens of Washington C. H. have been here trying to convince a committee of the senate that Colonel Coit of the Fourteenth regiment should not be paid $6,000, nor should the attorneys who have been defending him be paid by the state. Altogether, the bill which the state is asked to pay amounts to $80,000 After hearing all the Washington C. H citizens had to say, the committee recommended that the bill appropriating this sum should be assessed It probably will be, for the sentiment seems to be among members of the legislature that in firing upon the mob that broke down the door of the courthouse he was only carrying out the orders of the governor, and upholding, however disagreeably, the dignity of the law

Senator Avery having failed to have the age of consent raised to 18 years, Mr. Aldrich, a member of the house, is going to try to have the age of compulsory education raised to 18 It will be permitted, however, that children above the age of 14 who are engaged in some reputable employment shall not be compelled to relinquish it and go to school.

A bill having passed levying a state tax which will yield to the Ohio State university an annual income of $100,000 a year, and bills being pending which will in a similar way give to the Ohio university $35,000, Miami $25,000 and Wilberforce $17,000 a year, Cincinnati waits a state levy which will give to the University of Cincinnati $30,000 a year It is argued that as Hamilton county contributes $75,000 a year to the support of the common schools of other counties, and will, under these bills, if passed, pay $20,000 a year under the levy for university purposes, it ought to get something back—a sort of rebate, as it were

HARRY MINER.

Pagan.

The Latin word from which pagan is derived originally meant a fountain or spring, then the village which sprang up around it, and finally the residents in the village. As Christianity took strong root at first in the large centers of population and the worship of the pagan deities lingered longest in the country and among the country villages it came to be understood that a pagan, a villager, was, in virtue of his residence, a worshiper of the old gods, and thus the term acquired its present significance.

THE SOUTHERN POLE.

EXPLORERS NOW TURN THEIR ATTENTION TO THE ANTARCTICS.

Borchgrevink's Discoveries In Southern Seas and His Plans For a Future Expedition—An Antarctic Continent—The Great Ice Barrier of Victoria Land.

There is a vast section of this planet about which we know almost nothing. It lies around the south magnetic pole. The north pole has long been the goal of adventurous explorers who have traversed much of the frozen wastes which surround it, and now it is rumored that Nansen has reached the pole and is returning with definite information concerning it. At any rate, our maps of the arctic regions give us a good idea of the proportion of land and water there. When they reach the antarctic circle, however, the geographers stop and indicate their lack of information by leaving a blank space about the southern extremity of the globe.

EXPLORER BORCHGREVINK.

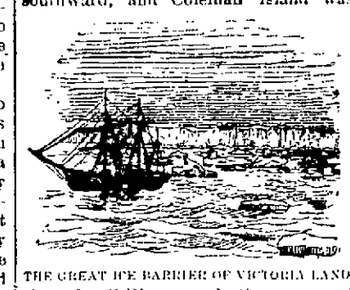
If it is true that Nansen has actually solved the mystery of the north, the chief ambition of future explorers will be directed toward the southern pole. Much of our arctic mapmaking has been done within the last half century, while during the last 44 years little or nothing has been added to our knowledge of that mysterious region below the antarctic circle. Since Sir James Ross returned in 1852 from his daring dash into the south polar seas and reported that he had discovered what he thought was a continent and which he named Victoria Land, there has been lots of speculating done, but no investigating, at least none under scientific control.

The old geographers accepted the theory that there must be a great continent there because land on that section of the globe was needed to preserve the proportions and keep the spheroid upright. Their successors could not accept this as a true theory and, lacking any definite evidence of the existence of such a continent and weary of waiting for explorers to supply the deficiency, finally scratched off the lines of the vague continent from their maps. It remains to be seen whether or not they will be able to definitely replace Antarctica within the next few years.

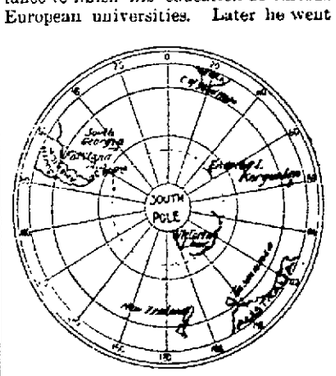
There is one man living today who has set foot on what he believes was this mysterious mainland of the frozen south and is confident that within a year he will have penetrated to the very pole itself. This is C. Egerberg Borchgrevink, the hardy Norseman who last summer startled the scientific world by a modest announcement of where he had been and what he had seen beyond the antarctic ice barrier. He made his statement before the international geographical congress in London, and his simple story was received with almost unprecedented enthusiasm. He was hailed as the hero of the antarctics, and plans for immediately following up his discoveries were at once formed.

Mr. Borchgrevink is now lecturing in this country, but next September he is to start at the head of a party of scientists for the unknown regions around the south pole. An English commercial company has offered to fit out the expedition and take the explorer and his party to Victoria Land. They are to go in a good sized steamship, and will carry with them a 74 ton steamer and a naphtha or steam launch for the use of the scientists. The steamship will load with whale and seal oil and skins, or with guano if nothing more valuable can be secured. The explorers will be landed and left to the mercy of an antarctic winter while the ship goes back to Melbourne, to return a year later.

Professor Borchgrevink is physically an ideal explorer. He is a stockily built, bronze faced man of only 31 years. He was born in Christiania of English and Norwegian parents. As a young man he made one trip before the mast on a sailing vessel, and left the sea with reluctance to finish his education at various European universities. Later he went to Australia, where he joined the survey department, and attracted attention by scaling Mount Lindsay, a precipitous peak in Queensland, a feat which had never before been accomplished.



THE GREAT ICE BARRIER OF VICTORIA LAND.



MAP OF THE SOUTH POLAR REGION.

He was a teacher of modern languages and science when he heard that a whaling steamer was to start from Melbourne for the antarctic seas and was to try to find the locality where Sir James Ross reported to have seen so many of the now almost extinct and very valuable "right" whales. Professor Borchgrevink at once applied for passage on the steamer, but was curtly informed that no scientific or other passengers were desired. Nothing daunted, the hardy Norseman offered to ship as a common sailor and was accepted. He signed articles to go as a seal shooter and took his quarters in the forecastle with the rest of the crew. In all his accounts of his voyage Borchgrevink has said little or nothing about the hardships which he endured, but it is known that the captain was unfriendly to him from the start, perhaps on account of the friendly and respectful feeling the crew showed to him.

The vessel in which he sailed was the Antarctic, an antiquated steamer, which had been patched up for the trip. She was far superior, however, to the sailing vessels Erebus and Terror, which Ross used. The start was made on Sept. 20, but owing to an accident which caused some delay it was Dec. 7 before he sighted, from his station in the crow's nest, the edge of the ice pack, the advance guard that tells of the existence of the great ice barrier that surrounds Victoria Land. For 38 days the ship struggled in the pack, dodging icebergs and threading her way through narrow channels that opened and closed as if the ice had been pieces of colored glass in a vast kaleidoscope. Christmas night was passed and the new year came in with the rays of the midnight sun shining down upon them. At last, on Jan. 14, they found clear water, and two days later, having steamed steadily southward, the forbidding coast line of Victoria Land, on which human foot had never been set, was sighted. Cape Adair was reached, from whence land could be seen stretching to the south and west as far as the eye could reach. It rose from dark, bare rocks into peaks of perpetual snow and ice 12,000 feet above the sea. Most of these peaks were of volcanic formation, if not all of them, and some had been in recent eruption. These were the smoking mountains which Ross told about.

On Jan. 18 they reached Possession island, where Ross made his only landing in the antarctic regions. Borchgrevink and some of the crew landed, and the young scientist told them that they were the second party to set foot on that island for half a century. He made quite an extended exploration of the island and scaled one of the highest peaks. Here he made one of the most important discoveries that have enriched antarctic lore.

"Quite unexpectedly," he says, "I found vegetation on the rocks about 30 feet above the sea level. Vegetation never was discovered in such southerly latitudes before. It is a cellular cryptogamous plant—a lichen."

Professor Borchgrevink does not say that most men would have passed by this insignificant growth without a thought, as Sir James Ross probably did. He saw in it an evidence of a continent.

On Jan. 20 the vessel again steamed southward, and Coleman island was sighted. Still onward they steamed for two days, entering waters which had never before been plowed by a keel, and on Jan. 22 they reached latitude 74 degrees. Here the practical captain decided to turn north again. He was looking for whales, and as none had been sighted, he could see no profit in going forward. It mattered little to him that before them was a solitude which man had never explored and which might never be reached again. He wanted whales. Just a little more than one degree to the south lay the south magnetic pole, according to Borchgrevink's calculations. He might easily have continued until the shore of the continent was reached, pushed on over the land if possible, and made his voyage one of the most famous since the days of Columbus.

But no! Whale oil was what he was after and not fame. So he turned back. The feeling of disappointment in the breast of the humble scientist before the mast may be imagined.

Back they went to Cape Adair, a day's sail to the north. There the captain was persuaded to make a landing. Borchgrevink was the first man of those in the two boats to set his foot on the mysterious continent. In his enthusiasm to gain this distinction he jumped into the icy water up to his waist and waded ashore. He made a hasty investigation of the shore and gathered a few specimens of rock and found some lichens similar to those on Possession island. Then the Antarctic steamed home through the ice pack and escaped before the southern polar winter set in and caught her in its icy grasp.

Professor Borchgrevink intends to have his party landed on the mainland near Coleman island. From there he will start with three Norwegian companions and traverse on snowshoes and sledges the distance of 160 miles intervening between the camp and the pole. What manner of country this is he will try to discover. He is almost sure that it is a continent. He does not know that it is not inhabited. The Eskimos live in a more severe climate. He thinks he has seen a trace of land animals, and he will try to find them.

Will he find the pole?

If he finds it, will he live to return?

He is confident of doing both. Thousands of scientists and millions of intelligent people who do not claim more than a speaking acquaintance with science will await the result of this expedition with expectant eagerness.

CYRUS SYLVESTER.

A LONG CAREER OF CRIME.

For Forty-five Years Brockway Has Been a Forger and Counterfeiter.

The recent trial and conviction at Trenton of William E. Brockway and his gang of counterfeiters, in which the secretary of the treasury was a witness, was one of the most notable criminal cases of recent times, as Brockway himself is one of the most notable criminals. He has the appearance of a venerable and respected church member. He is 74 years of age. As a lad he was apprenticed to a printer of state bank notes. He studied chemistry at Yale.

His career as a forger and counterfeiter began in 1850. He was arrested by the government in October, 1880, for the forgery of $204,000 United States 6 per cent $1,000 bonds. For this he was sentenced to 30 years in prison, but upon his surrendering all his counterfeiting tools and giving valuable information concerning similar swindles sentence was suspended.

WILLIAM E. BROCKWAY.

He was arrested again in 1883 for forging Morris and Essex railroad bonds and sentenced to five years in state prison. The suspended sentence was, for some reason, not enforced against him.

Brockway lived for many years under the name of Spencer at 264 Clermont avenue, Brooklyn, with his wife, son and daughter. He passed as a sea captain, and his absences from home were accounted for as "voyages." The family were members of Dr. Baker's Church of the Messiah, and Brockway himself frequently attended the services there.

He was supposed to be an eminently respectable member of society until he quarreled with his wife and, it is said, shot her. Soon afterward he was arrested for crossing the Wall street "dead line," and his real character was disclosed. It is said that his family, up to that time, had been in ignorance of his real business, supposing him to be an honest engraver and printer.

The details of the arrest at Hoboken last fall of Brockway and his accomplices are well known. The detectives captured $200,000 in Canadian notes, with only the reverse side printed; $200,000 in United States gold certificates, nearly finished, and fiber paper prepared for printing $400,000 more. It is said that the counterfeiters were backed by some of the wealthiest and cleverest criminals in the country.

TO KEEP TAB ON HER LOVER.

This Modern Young Woman Wanted to Wear Trousers and Shadow Him.

Miss Eissing of Milford, Conn., is a young woman who has evidently read her Shakespeare to advantage and found that when a heroine wishes to know the true character of her lover the proper and romantic thing to do is to adopt men's attire and be near him in his hours of ease and relaxation. Miss Eissing fell in love with Harry Cavanagh, a candy drummer of Bridgeport, but felt a little suspicious concerning his habits and wished to satisfy herself whether he was really worthy of her love.

She had heard of maidens who came to grief masquerading as men, and, not wishing to be exposed in her detective work, she applied to Superintendent Birmingham of the Bridgeport police for permission to wear men's clothes. She explained that she wished to "keep tab" on her lover's movements and see for herself that he was not inclined to dissipation. She convinced the superintendent that it was all right, and her request was granted. Miss Eissing gave an assumed name, but her identity leaked out and caused so much talk that she gave up the plan.

MISS EISSING.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Cavanagh will take warning by this evidence of his sweetheart's scruples and keep carefully in the straight and narrow path.

Preacher Drank Whisky at a Funeral.

Rev. Jesse J. Roseberry, a prominent Baptist minister of Central City, W. Va., was arrested for drinking while in a funeral procession. The day was very cold, and the minister, while near the center of the town, turned his vehicle to one side, and, pulling a flask of whisky from his pocket, took a drink. Marshal Griffith, who chanced to be near at the time, arrested the minister, and he was taken before Mayor Hall, and, in addition to a fine, the mayor delivered him a rigid lecture. After paying the fine the minister drove at a rapid rate toward the cemetery, and on arriving there found that the procession had been waiting for him for almost half an hour. The minister claims that his physician prescribed the whisky, and that he was going according to directions. He is 54 years of age and has been preaching for 27 years.

Poisoned With Diamonds.

When the sultan of Turkey is reduced to getting rid of a member of his own family, he invests the ceremony with considerable style. One or two fine diamonds are powdered and placed in the unfortunate kismet's food. The sultan believes in sustaining the dignity of the family at any rate.

Queer Rumor About the Kaiser.

An odd story is in circulation which is probably false, but which is worth recording. It is said that among the large projects ever which the German emperor dreams is one for winning Holland, and with her, ships, colonies and commerce, without a war. A marriage between his eldest son and the young queen would give him such influence in Holland that the Dutch might consent to enter the empire on the Bavarian terms. To further this project the kaiser desires to conciliate Dutchmen, and in the invasion of the Transvaal he thought he discerned his opportunity; hence his telegram and the abortive effort to introduce German troops into Pretoria via Delagoa bay.

The scheme is an adroit one, but lacks solid foundation, for the Dutch are proud of their independence, and the Boers have no wish to exchange King Log for King Stork. They are most civil to Germany just at present, but Mr. Hofmeyer's speech embodies their inner sentiments.—London Spectator.

J. W. Pierce, Republic, Ia., says: "I have used One Minute Cough Cure in my family and for myself, with results so entirely satisfactory that I can hardly find words to express myself as to its merit. I will never fail to recommend it to others, on every occasion that presents itself." Flocken's drug store.

Testing Water.

Into a perfectly clean bottle, having a stopper of ground glass, put five ounces of the water to be tested. To the water add ten grains (by weight) of pure, granulated white sugar. Cork tight and set in a window, exposed freely to light, but not to the direct rays of the sun. Do not disturb the bottle and keep the temperature as near 70 degrees F. as possible.

If the water contains organic matter within 48 hours an abundance of whitish specks will be seen floating about, and the more organic matter the more specks. In a week or ten days, if the water is very bad, the odor of rancid butter will be noticed on removing the stopper.

The little specks will settle to the bottom, where they will appear as white, flaky masses. Such water should not be used for drinking purposes.—Philadelphia Press.

Threw Away His Canes.

Mr. D. Wiley, ex-postmaster, Black Creek, N. Y., was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was only able to hobble around with canes, and even then it caused him great pain. After using Chamberlain's Pain Balm he was so much improved that he threw away his canes. He says this liniment did him more good than all other medicines and treatment put together. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by L. H. Flocken, druggist.

Don't invite disappointment by experimenting. Depend on One Minute Cough Cure and you have immediate relief. It cures croup. The only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. Flocken's drug store.

Wanted a Change.

The two small boys who wanted to fight Indians had gone some distance from home. The romance had dwindled, and a discouragement which neither liked to confess had taken possession.

"Look here," said one of them at last. "I've been playin I'm Sierra Sam for two days now, haven't I?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Well, I'm kind o' tired o' that game. I think I'll play I'm the prodigal son."—Washington Star.

It not only is so, it must be so One Minute Cough Cure acts quickly, and that's what makes it go. Flocken's drug store.

A Benighted Child.

"This," said the mother in her best instructive voice as she guided the child through the museum, "this is a praying machine used by the benighted heathen."

"I don't think that is half as nice as having your praying done by the preacher, like we do, do you, mamma?" asked the small girl.—Indianapolis Journal.

Men are often wiser than they act. They know how to be happy but sometimes they are miserable. They know there is no happiness worth the name without health; yet they neglect health. They allow dyspepsia and biliousness and constipation to get a hold on them and make life wretched. Those three complaints usually come together. Constipation affects the stomach and liver. That brings on bilious attacks and indigestion, headaches, nausea, dizziness, queer sensations of weakness and palpitation. Your nerves are unstrung, your system is sluggish. You lose ambition. The fact is your whole constitution is being slowly undermined. What you need is Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

They cure constipation, dyspepsia and biliousness in the only cure, permanent way. There is nothing violent or irritating about them, they work mildly though quickly. They tone and strengthen the bowels to carry on their functions naturally. They gently stimulate the flow of bile from the liver and the digestive juices of the stomach. You don't become a slave to their use as with other pills. They make you regular and then you can leave them. That is the difference between Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets and the something "just as good," which a sharp druggist tries to substitute. Don't let him do so with you.

If you want to keep your health and strength without consulting the doctor so often, the best thing you can do is to write to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for a copy of Dr Pierce's great book the "People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." Send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only. It is a large book of 1008 pages, with over 300 illustrations. It is the same book of which 680,000 copies were sold at $1.50 each. The only difference is in the binding, which in the free edition is of strong manilla paper. There is no other such complete family doctor book in the English language. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. Send soon, before all are given away. They are going off rapidly, therefore, do not delay sending immediately if in want of one. The above generous offer is limited to 500,000 copies.

All in One Family, but Regrettable.

The Argus heard of a case which occurred recently in which a funeral was the means of disclosing a serious breach of trust. There is a certain woman who is not allowed a very large amount of spending money by her husband. Being in temporary need recently, she conceived the brilliant idea of pawning his Sunday suit for a few days, intending to have it safely redeemed and back in the house by Saturday night. It happened, however, that a business associate of her husband died quite suddenly, and, the time arriving for the funeral, the husband went to look for his Sunday clothes. He found them not, and a scene followed.

The moral of this story ought to be that the man made his wife a more liberal allowance, but he didn't.—Portland (Mo.) Argus.

One Minute Cough Cure touches the right spot. It also touches it at the right time if you take it when you have a cough or cold. See the point? Then don't cough. Flocken's drug store.

An Unfortunate Chap.

Checkerly—Poor Algy! He's so horridly defawmed!

Stripes—Defawmed?

Checkerly—Yaas, poor boy. His eyes are so pwominent that he cawn't wear a monocle!—Truth.

The little daughter of Mr. Fred Webber, Holland, Mass., had a very bad cold and cough which he had not been able to cure with any thing. I gave him a 25 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says W. Holden, merchant and postmaster at West Brimfield, and the next time I saw him he said it worked like a charm. This remedy is intended especially for acute throat and lung diseases such as colds, croup and whooping cough, and it is famous for its cures. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by L. H. Flocken, druggist.

Of Little Importance.

"What is it?" asked the sultan.

"Oh, it's only another ultimatum," replied his private secretary.

"Well, number it 426 and file it away with the others."—Chicago Post.

APPROPRIATE PERFUMES.

They Must Be Delicate and Always the Very Best Kind.

Wax or spermaceti spots, such as are made by drops from candles, may be removed from clothing by covering the spot with blotting paper and passing a warm iron over it, allowing the iron to stand for a moment. They may be taken from black cloth by simply rubbing them lightly with a linen cloth dipped in cold water.

The question of perfumes is still an undecided one. A few women of refinement hold that any perfume about the person or apartment is vulgar, while others, of equal authority and good taste, always keep all their personal belongings scented and perfume the atmosphere of their rooms. One thing is certain—if any essence at all is used, it must be of the very best, as cheap perfumery is an abomination, rank and often unwholesome on account of its inferior ingredients.

Musk odors ought to be always avoided, as they disgust a large number of persons. Unscented toilet soaps are also to be preferred, as a rule. Some women use eau de cologne for the bath, but as it is the alcohol in it that makes it useful for this purpose pure alcohol may be substituted at a less expense and may be more delicately scented by adding a few drops of essence of violet or heliotrope.

A sketch is given of a street costume of ribbed wool in violet and dark green. The godet skirt is adorned around the foot with two bands of fur. The bodice is slashed to show a lining of dark green velvet and has a small pelerine of the wool goods bordered with fur. The full portion of the bouffant sleeves is slashed to show puffings of dark green velvet, and the belt and collar ruche are of velvet. The hat accompanying the gown is of violet felt, with a soft crown of green velvet. The brim is bordered with a narrow band of violet ostrich tips, and a cluster of violet plumes is placed at the back.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Probate Judge.

To the Republicans of Marion County, Ohio: I hereby respectfully solicit your support as the Republican candidate for the office of Probate Judge, at your coming county convention. Respectfully,
CHARLES F. GARBERSON.

The six senators who voted against the Cuban resolution look lonesome.

According to popular belief spring begins tomorrow. But it depends greatly on the kind of weather we have.

The account of today's republican convention would indicate a lovefeast. Marion county Republicans seem to be happy.

Ex-President Harrison says that only two persons know the date of his wedding. Evidently the minister has not been engaged.

A Gallipolis man predicts that the end of the world is at hand. If he lived at Galion there might be some excuse for such an insane notion.

Ohio is always proud of Senator Sherman, but his speech on the Cuban question will increase the number of his admirers among the Buckeyes.

Miss Clara Barton, of the Red Cross society, has started into Armenia, to administer to the wants of the suffering. She goes by permission of the Sultan.

Inasmuch as this is leap year it is to be hoped that Miss Spring will not allow Old Winter to linger long in her lap. She has the popping privilege in her own hands.

Princess Amelia Rives Chanler Troubetzkoy is reported to be ill at her father's home. Probably a result of shock from being suddenly and unexpectedly addressed in her new name.

There is a growing feeling among Republicans that Hon. Thomas Carter, chairman of the national republican committee, should take freely of the little liver pills bearing his name or resign.

The Cincinnati detectives are arriving no nearer a solution of the Pearl Bryan mystery than they were two weeks ago. It seems a practical impossibility to get a head in their investigations.

Some few people, not the politicians, obtained the mistaken idea that the Republicans would nominate their candidates for county office today. Democrats will have their candidates in the field early this time, and Republicans will wait and take their measure before nominating their ticket.

An early settlement of the Venezuelan boundary dispute is now probable. Great Britain having yielded to the demand of the United States, that the question be submitted to the American commission. England and Venezuela have both submitted official documents to the commission, now in session in Washington. Those who thought it impossible for Lord Salisbury to recede from his former position can now see how easy it is to crawfish gracefully when nobody's looking.

It is being predicted that the passage of the Kimmell medical bill by the legislature will end in scandal. The bill contemplates that every doctor in the state shall pay the amount of $5, and there being about 10,000 of them the sum thus raised reaches $50,000. This goes into the state treasury, but is subject to the draft of the examining board of seven, who can draw it all out at any time and use it as they like. There is also a belief that the board of examiners has practically been settled upon. If there is a scheme on of this kind it was without the knowledge of a majority of the physicians who labored for the bill's passage.

A BRAND NEW SNAKE STORY.

Relatives Reunited by the Printing of One Which Is of Itself Not Bad.

A snake story published in a local paper a short time ago was the means of bringing together a family that had been separated for more than 40 years, neither member knowing what had become of the other.

Fifty years ago the family of Mordecai Ellis lived on the banks of Rattlesnake creek near its confluence with the Wabash river, a few miles from Lockport, Ind. One day a little daughter, Alice, now Mrs W. B. Wilson of Kokomo, while on her way to the spring after a pail of water, fell into a rattlesnake den up to her shoulders, and on being pulled out a dozen or more of the reptiles clung to her garments. Ellis, assisted by neighbors, raided the cave, and at the close of the battle 21 rattlesnakes lay in a pile dead.

The story, as retold at a family gathering recently, was printed in a home paper. A day or two since Mrs. Wilson received a letter from St. Joseph, Mo., conveying the information that two cousins lived at that place that had been missing for 40 years, one being the wife of John Fulling of the metropolitan police force, the other William G. Brookus, who in early times lived near the Ellis family in the Rattlesnake creek neighborhood. They read the story, recalled the snake slaughter and added many forgotten particulars. By the same means other relatives were located in Nebraska.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

IN MEMORY OF LINCOLN.

Gavel For the St. Louis Convention From His Log Cabin.

Lincoln's memory will not be allowed to wane at the Republican national convention. Every time the chairman raps for order he will bring down on his table a gavel made from a log hewn by the immortal statesman president. When Lincoln lived at New Salem, Ills., in 1832, he built a log cabin for a home. She was clerking in a store at the time, but worked part of hours to raise the house. It is from one of the logs in this house the gavel is being made. One end of it will be mounted with silver and engraved as follows:

"Made by W. H. Bartells, Carthage, Ills., from a log of the cabin built by Abraham Lincoln, 1832, at New Salem, Ills."

The inscription on the gold mounted end of the mallet will read: "National Republican convention, held at St. Louis, June 16, 1896, nominating ——— for president."

40 YEARS THE STANDARD.

ODDS AND ENDS.

The STAR's friend, the venerable Dr. Joshua Copeland, of LaRue, writes this paper under a recent date in his usual entertaining style, but neglects to say a great deal of a subject which his numerous friends would most particularly delight in hearing—himself. This much he says, however:

"I am traveling in my 79th year. Won't be long before I will be old."

Men of forty and fifty years, who imagine they are getting old ought to be ashamed of themselves after reading that from a veteran. Think of a man of 79 years talking about getting old soon.

Some good lawyer might be able to get a job by applying to City Solicitor Crissinger.

Out on east Center street Mr. Crissinger owns a vacant lot which has a duplicate valuation of $160.

They paved in front of that lot last summer, and the assessed costs amount to $500.

"Doctor," said a Fourth ward resident to his family physician, "I'm troubled with insomnia; haven't been able to get a good night's rest for three months. Can you do anything for me?"

"What have you tried?"

"Tried everything in the category of opiates and patent medicines, but all to no purpose; can't go to sleep and remain asleep an hour at a time to save my life."

"Look here," observed the conscientious physician after a moment's reflection. "You're a personal friend of mine?"

"Yes."

"Well, I might prescribe for you in the usual way, but it would be useless and would only put you to unnecessary expense. Your case is a bad one and there is only one hope for you. It will require some sacrifice, but I am sure you will have no further trouble, and will be able to sleep soundly."

"Suffering as I have done, I am ready for any sacrifice you can name. What is it I must do for relief?"

"Get an appointment on the board of health."

The Fostoria Times refers to the editor of the STAR as "bright and amiable." Our regular paid-up subscribers will no doubt marvel at this discovery. There is a probability that the Times has been giving the X rays a thorough and accurate test.

Come down, Mr. Times man, and let genius commingle long enough to blow the froth off a couple of soda waters.

Let it be recorded to the everlasting credit of the democratic candidates for office in Marion county that they are not signing their announcement cards "Many Democrats." They have shown their courage by attaching their own signatures. The change is complimentary to the intelligence of the voters. It shows that they are not taken for gold brick subjects, or Anneke Jans heirs.

You are right, dear Ethel, the X as in X rays is to represent an unknown quantity.

P. S.—A V is also often an unknown quantity with some of us.

Samuel T. Beerbower, in relating a few of his army reminiscences the other evening, spoke of a spring near Missionary Ridge, where he was wounded, and where two comrades gave him a drink of water. A stranger dropped into the Western Union telegraph office the other day and asked about a certain family in the city. He was informed that the daughter was in the Girls' Industrial Home at Delaware, and the boy had been sent to the Reform farm at Lancaster. The fellow seemed surprised, and as he buttoned up his coat remarked that the family must be pretty well to do to send their children off to school in that manner.

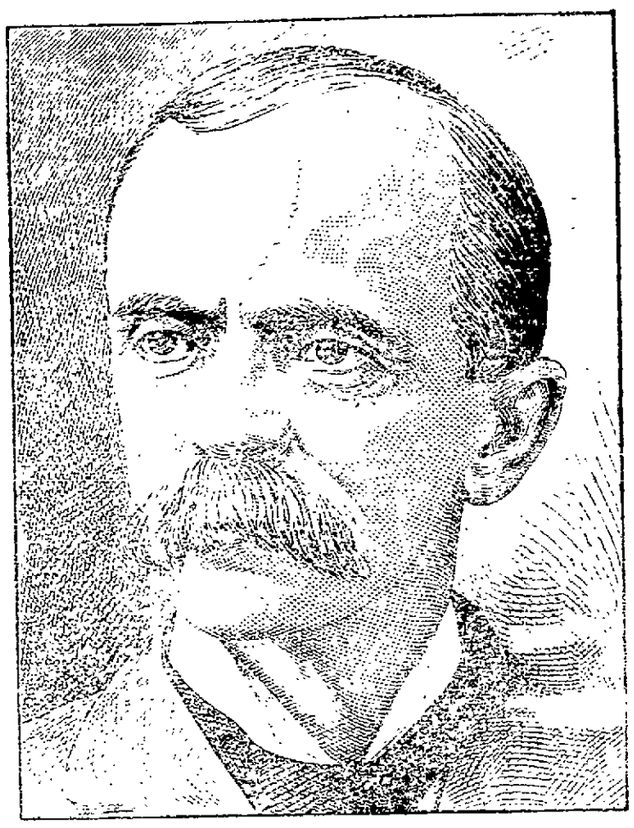
ANOTHER COLLEGE PRESIDENT

Finds in Paine's Celery Compound the Greatest of All Remedies.



President Charles Dole is not the first great college president or great educator who has been outspoken in praise of Paine's celery compound.

The detailed and convincing testimonial of President Cook of the National Teachers' association, is fresh in the public mind.

One of the foremost educators in America, Principal L. L. Camp of the Dwight School, New Haven, has called Paine's celery compound the greatest invigorator in existence.

Such men as State Treasurer Colvin of New York, Mr. Carlisle's private secretary, Mayor McShane of Montreal, Rev. Fr. Ouellet, Commodore Howell, ex-Minister to Austria, John M. Francis, Edmund Russell and a host of others whose character and learning are recognized by the world, have publicly stated that when they were sick it was Paine's celery compound that made them well.

Thousands of equally responsible, though perhaps less widely known men and women, whose word in their own cities and towns is as good as the best in the land, have testified to the merits of this, the greatest of all remedies.

Enough consistent, trustworthy testimony, always of the highest character, is today in every one's possession to convince any doubter (if one exists) of the remarkable power of Paine's celery compound to make the sick well again.

President Dole was born in 1845. He graduated from Norwich University in the class of 1869, and became professor of political science in the university. In 1895 he was unanimously elected president, to succeed ex-Secretary of State Hon. George Nichols. He has held, as the public good required, nearly all the public offices in the gift of his townsmen. In a recent letter, he says:

"I have used Paine's celery compound for several years, and find it an excellent remedy for nervous exhaustion, especially that caused by long continued mental work."

The use of Paine's celery compound is soon followed by an increase in the quantity of active, ruddy blood, quick in its rounds.

Dyspepsia, neuralgia and rheumatism are routed from the body. Diseases due to deranged, under-fed nervous tissues are rapidly cured, and good spirits, hopefulness, and an eagerness to get well take the place of melancholy low spirits, morose temper and the fear of approaching calamity, that are the shadows of a run-down nervous system.

Nerve-tired, despondent, enfeebled persons again enjoy living after their feeble, shrunken nerves have been fed by a grand restorative like Paine's celery compound.

Sleeplessness, usually due to an abnormally excited, overworked, but under-fed brain, vanishes with the coming of a rich tide of nourishing blood.

Paine's celery compound purifies the blood, stores the nervous system with energy, and hurries along the replacing of worn-out, diseased parts by healthy, active tissues.

Every city has men and women who praise Paine's celery compound in their homes, talk about it to their neighbors and rely on it in all cases of threatened or actual sickness.

All persons who keep abreast with the achievements of the day know the remarkable strengthening effects Paine's celery compound can bring about where the brain or the nerves need refreshing, restoring and regulating. Thousands of persons have been convinced of the power of Paine's celery compound to make them strong and well.

Lively While It Lasted.

Ben Bigford, the drayman, left his team at the Big Four House, this morning, while he went inside. The horses became frightened and started west on Mill or Railroad street, dashing onto the sidewalk in front of the Commercial House. Looked like they were going to take chances in the Metropolitan barber shop, but stopped suddenly by coming in contact with a telephone pole. E. Yingling, who was in front of the bakery at the time, stepped out to stop the runaways, but suddenly remembering the fate of the man who got in front of a cyclone changed his mind and stepped out of the way. One horse was thrown and the wagon demolished.

Deacon:—"Going to church, Brother Camera?"

Brother Camera:—"No, I have to arrange the gallery to take the choir after services."—Truth.

The weather moderated considerably Thursday and Friday and that, together with the rain, had the effect of loosening up the brick pavements about town until they were in frightful shape Now, where almost all our walks are made of stone it is hard to understand how we managed to get along with brick walks as long as we did.

Manager Fisher, of the Postal Telegraph company, is a romancer of the highest order, judging by his latest effort. Mr. Fisher says that for the last two ore three weeks he has had trouble in getting messages over the line. The trouble instead of passing away was getting worse and worse so Mr. Fisher and an assistant went out to inspect the line to locate the trouble. Of course they looked for a "ground" some place and a "ground" was what they found, but it wasn't just the kind of trouble they expected Out on Silver street they made the discovery that from ten to twelve young ladies had fastened curling irons to fish poles and by that method put the curling irons in contact with the wire. When the irons were hot they would detach them from the pole and curl their bangs. There are some little inaccuracies in the story but that's no affair of ours. Mr. Fisher must attend to that

The People's store is about to go out of the carpet and dry goods business and with that end in view Messrs Markert and Schoenlaub are advertising a closing-out sale of all the goods in those departments. It may be that the ordinances to put slot machines out of the city may be rescinded. A DRUNKEN DRUMMER.

He Is Locked Up and Registers as H. Hotashell.

Officer Clapsaddle arrested a traveling man on Main street, Friday night, who was gloriously drunk and very disorderly. It was 10:30 o'clock when the officer got the man into the prison. He stated that he did not want to be locked up all night, and asked to be released. He put up his watch for his appearance and went to the Hotel Marion.

It was an amusing scene. The fellow stated that he had been at Kenton and had been induced to play pool with a number of other traveling men, and the result was that he became very much intoxicated He then came to this city, and while wandering around in his maudlin state was arrested. He was asked to register his name, and much to the amusement of the police, registered H. Hotashell.

The drummer was fined one dollar and costs this morning and his watch was returned to him.

Off for the East.

Mr D. Yake left today for Boston, New York Philadelphia and Lowell, Mass. While in the latter place he will be shown through the largest carpet factory in the world, having received a special invitation from the head of the Lowell company for whom Mr. Yake has sold more of their famous Lowell carpets than any dealer in this section of the country.

Mr. Yake will spend about three weeks in Boston, New York and Philadelphia selecting the latest novelties for spring trade in silks, dress goods, spring capes, carpets, laces, shirt waists, trimmings, etc., where with spot cash and in the quantities Mr. Yake intends purchasing, everything will be bought at factory prices, therefore saving the middleman's profit.

Mr. Yake will give his customers the benefit, selling goods at as low if not lower than other merchants are compelled to pay. 83 t2

PROMINENT MAN

Leaves Suspicious Footprints in the Sands of Whetstone.

Wauseon, Feb. 29.—Several of the boys in town engaged in the muskrat trapping business. They bought thirty good traps, costing about 50cts each, which they set along the river. A few days ago, when going to visit them, they found them gone. An examination brought to light the fact that a man had taken them and the tracks led to a prominent man's residence. It is expected that warrants will follow.

There was a dance in town and a party outside of town last night. The dance was largely attended.

There will be a leap year party here tonight at the residence of Miss Lily Selanders.

School closes Wednesday noon for the winter term.

Andy Richards returned home from his grandfather's, who lives in Columbus. He spent the winter there.

The traveling men say that merchants give their orders to the houses that are best able to guarantee them low rates, and that in many instances, action of the roads prevents them from getting orders that they might otherwise secure. The association will make every effort to secure equitable freight rates everywhere

STORY OF LOLA MONTEZ

A Historic Adventuress of Uncertain Age and Origin.

RUINED THE KING OF BAVARIA.

Closed a University, Broke Up a Ministry and Forced the Resignation of King Louis—Died In Brooklyn and Buried by Charity In Greenwood

There are living many men yet in the prime of life who distinctly remember the charming, world noted adventuress, Lola Montez. There is living today a man prominent in New York society, the head of a great banking institution and the director and advisor in many rich corporations, whose life was nearly wrecked by this woman. His salvation was due to the intervention of friends rather than to his own forethought or will power, for he had become not only the dupe but the slave of this most fascinating woman.

It is not a little remarkable that the origin of some of the most famous historic adventuresses is either unknown or vague ly obscure. Catherine of Russia, Nell Gwynn, Lola Montez, Mme. Blavatsky and many others like meteors have flashed from obscurity into the zenith of temporary power and popularity. They are the most startling phenomena of history, and their names survive by reason of the mystery that attaches to their origin and the amazing audacity of their careers.

The right name of this woman if indeed she had a legal right to any name but that of her more unknown and equally mysterious mother, is uncertain, but it is believed to be Gilbert. She said her name was Maria Dolores Eliza Rosanna Gilbert, and that her father was a Scotchman, captain in the English service, and her mother a Spanish creole born in New Orleans. In some of her latest writing she substituted the name Porris for Rosanna, and while at first she claimed that she was born in Scotland in 1817 in her later years she declared that she was born in 1820 in Limerick, Ireland.

If Captain Gilbert, the father of Lola Montez, was not a myth, he was a scamp for although Lola speaks of him rather affectionately in her autobiography there is no evidence of his appearing on the stage in any scene of her romantic and varied career.

The mother is said to have been very beautiful. She appeared in England while her child was but little more than an infant. In London this woman taught singing, dancing, Spanish and French, so that her daughter came naturally by those accomplishments that subsequently brought her into such great prominence.

Lola Montez was of medium height beautifully formed, and at the age of 23 was sought for by artists as a model. Her hair was long, thick, silky and of the blue black hue that dressed the Spanish ancestry of which she was so proud. Her complexion was a warm olive and her eyes a dark bluish gray. Her features were neither regular nor classical, but were full of changing expression. Her mouth was perfect, her teeth even and white and her forehead low and broad, but the chin, so potent with her that it rode peasants and princes her slaves, lay in her bewitching manners.

In her nineteenth year Lola Montez who had already won metropolitan notoriety by her original and graceful dancing married Captain James of the English army. A short time before this her mother, whose reputation in London was far from enviable, and who was still a handsome woman, crowned an erring career by running away with a married man, an attache of the Spanish embassy to the court of St. James.

Captain James immediately after his marriage went to India, and he took his wife with him. At first she seemed to be a model of all the proprieties for she could look and act like a nun when she chose, but soon after reaching Calcutta her inherited and cultivated tendencies asserted themselves.

Young, beautiful and strangely accomplished, Lola was at once a great social favorite in the Indian capital and the toast of all the gay young officers at their clubs. Although the European society in India was much less constrained than in London yet Lola Montez's contempt for the ordinary proprieties soon brought her name into unenviable prominence. Her daring flirtations became the talk of the city. Soon women shrugged her, and even single men feared to have their names associated with hers.

At length Captain James' patience became exhausted. Failing to check the scandalous recital of his wife's actions quarrels took place. The result was that without a word of warning Mrs. James packed up her belongings and informally sailed back to Europe.

She went directly to Paris where she once found employment as a Spanish dancer, and here for the first time she appeared before the world under the now well known name of Lola Montez or the mountain flower or seed, as it is in Spanish.

She was now about 25 years of age that is in the acceptance of a typical age of womanhood. Lola Montez began dancing in an obscure place of entertainment and so great was her power of fascination and so undoubted her ability to interest that soon managers were bidding against each other for her services and foreign Princes were discussing matters of state over the wonder.

Artists sought for the privilege of painting her portrait and sculptors wished to model her form. Her name was on every one's lips and she was the toast of the gay young officers at their clubs.

CTICS OF TOM REED

Policy of Inaction Has Not Been Successful.

MORE THE REED OF OLD.

Only Conservative Himself, but Tried Make the House So—Eager to Break Records For a Brief Session of Con-

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—[Special.]—Reed now expects to finish up the congress, so far as the house is ned, before the 1st of May. In words, the speaker is eager to break cords for brevity of session. The ks are he will succeed in his design. appropriation bills are now farther ced than they have been at a similar in the memory of the oldest inhabit-

It is agreed on all sides that there ght chance of any important legisla- except the appropriation bills be- attempted. The fate of the tariff bill ed once for all, in the opinion of all leaders of both parties, any effort to date at this session on currency or ne questions. Nothing is in the way adjournment of congress by May 1.

Give Business a Chance.

Doubtless the country will be glad to e congress stop and give business a ce. It is a favorite theory among ness men that as long as congress is session commerce continues duller than uld be without congress. It is be- d the uncertainty as to what the ngress may or may not do unsettles fidence and promotes dullness of trade. s is true, perhaps the big speaker will ve general thanks for his policy of rning the session.

t the same time it may well be doubt- if Speaker Reed is satisfied with the k of the session up to this time. In rst place, the senate and not the house been the center of attraction. Whereas e congress met every one was expect- to see Mr. Reed at the very center of on, in the thick of the fighting, as it e he has really had a very dull and mplace sort of winter. There has been nothing sensational or especially in- esting in his performances or in those the body of which he is the acknowl- ed master. This dullness and lack of rical effect have been very disappoint- to many of Mr. Reed's warmest ad- rers. They contend that what the coun- likes Reed for is his fighting ability, originality, his courage, his willing- s to go in and do something, no matter o or what stands in the way.

t is a theory with many students of lic opinion that the people always seize on one or two particular incidents in career of a politician and idealize them a typification of his character. Few n become very popular or greatly es- med in the public eye for a general ree of commonplace usefulness. Forty rs of patient but unsensational toil. thout striking incident or those features ich stir the imagination, will not put a n at the very top of the ladder of popu- ity. One act of dash or courage, of ghority or distinguished success, will n. Having formed its ideal the public ely lets go. It does not change its view. e man himself now becomes responsible failure to continue popular. All he s to do is to meet this popular ideal, to e up to it, to justify it, to approximate f he does not care to strain points by aching for the whole for it, and he will all right. But woe to him if he falls from t ideal and makes no attempt to stand it.

Has Become Dignified.

Mr. Reed's friends sorrowfully claim s is just what he has been doing. They y he has deliberately deserted the ideal ich the public was pleased to form of n, and that as a result he has lost popu- ity. I know what Mr. Reed's idea was, I have gathered it from himself and m his intimate friends, and it was one ich did him credit. When he came to shington last fall, it was with the con- ousness that he was in the public eye as ominent candidate for president. But Reed realized that he had come to be oked upon by perhaps a majority of his low citizens as a man of too much bold- ss of action, of too grasping and original character. In other words, he was a ubination of the rigid, forceful, willful r and the boyish, joking, sarcastic and times playful humorist. Mr. Reed rel- ed neither of these ideas. It seemed to m that if he were going to be a presiden- l candidate in earnest he must take on observatism, give up czarism; become re and more serious and less and less ined to sarcasm and jokes.

Here, in the estimation of his friends, where he made his mistake. He has rried out his ideas to the letter, so far his personal conduct is concerned. He no more the Reed of old. He is con- rvatism personified. He has succeeded doing that which most people who new him would have said a year ago was ctually impossible—he has transformed himself into a staid and sober and unag- ressive gentleman who rarely has any- ing sharp to say to or about any one on e face of the earth.

Reed's tactics led him to adopt a con- rvative programme for the house too. stead of some radical legislation, instead something bold and constructive, in- ead of a new policy of some description alculated to dazzle the country, he early nounced there was to be nothing at all mply the appropriation bills and an vestment. He would have adhered to s programme, too, had it not been for resident Cleveland. When Mr. Cleve- nd called upon congress, just before hristmas, to do something for the cur- ncy and the revenue, Mr. Reed was ill ased. He was cross. He felt hurt. is dearest plans had been interfered with.

A Dull Winter.

It can be said, to Mr. Reed's credit, hat, though he did not like the situation, aced it manfully. Though he believed e president was doing this merely for ffect upon public opinion, and not with e slightest notion that anything could be accomplished, the speaker faced the or- ; tried honestly to do something useful the country and carried out in good h his part of the scheme.

On the whole, it can be said Mr. Reed's y of inaction has not been a success. has not kept him up to the country's al of his character. It has not satisfied members of the house, who have had ller a dull winter so far. It has pro- d a probable early adjournment, and ch has been done to the country. s proved the speaker's friends recently It doesn't make much difference the country indorses what we do The country is not satisfied un- we do something."

WALTER WELLMAN.

THE WHITE HOUSE KINDERGARTEN.

Miss Frieda Barthman Teaches Ruth and Esther Cleveland.

Miss Frieda Barthman, who has been engaged as special instructress for the children of the White House, is regarded as one of the brightest kindergartners in the country. She comes from Boston, where she held the position as principal instructor in the kindergarten department of the Thomas N. Hart school. Miss Barthman owes her present good fortune, for the fame which she will gain by her new engagement may well be regarded as such, partly to an accident, but mainly to her well earned reputation as a successful teacher of children. She first met Mrs. Cleveland at Marion a few years ago while taking a summer vacation. The president's wife was attracted by her cheerful, winning ways and when she wanted an instructress for her children she sent for the Boston girl.

MISS BARTHMAN.

Miss Barthman comes naturally by her talent for teaching, for her mother, Mrs. Emilie Barthman, is one of the foremost of the pioneer kindergartners and has been employed in the Boston school ever since the inception of the Froebel system, having been the first teacher selected by Mrs Mary Quincy Shaw when she inaugurated kindergarten teaching 18 years ago as a purely philanthropic venture.

Miss Barthman is a rather pretty young lady of about 25. She began teaching eight years ago as an assistant to her mother. She is of German extraction and comes of an excellent family which, previous to reverses, was wealthy. She is well prepared for the instruction of the first children of the land, for she has passed through the several grades of the public schools in Boston as well as the girls' high school, and has taken a course of special instruction in private schools, including a course under the noted kindergartner, Miss Lucy H. Symonds.

At first she was engaged to teach only the president's two older children, Ruth and Esther, but the wives of some of the cabinet officers wished to take advantage of the opportunity, and a class of about ten children, representing Uncle Sam's official family, was made up, and Miss Barthman will have them under her charge in the White House nursery for three hours a day for the next few months. She will tell them pretty little stories, teach them cute little songs, show them how to make mud pies of artistic design, and generally prepare their young minds for the more serious instruction which is to come later.

FUTURE MRS. VANDERBILTS?

Matrimonial Prospects of Miss Grace Wilson and Miss Amy Bend.

With two Vanderbilts in the matrimonial field, and both said to be considering such an important step, the metropolitan society gossips have plenty of material for confidential chatter. Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., is furnishing the most fruitful topic by his persistent wooing of Miss Grace Wilson. Cornelius, Jr., is a callow youth of 21, who has been out of Yale not quite a year. His attentions to Miss Wilson began to be noticed last July at Newport. His parents tried to nip this in the bud by sending him to Europe, after being assured by the young lady's parents that they intended to pass the season in New York. Mrs. Ogden Goelet, however, was not reckoned as a factor in the affair, and this is where Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr., made his mistake. Mrs. Goelet is Miss Wilson's sister, and she suddenly decided to go to Europe and take Miss Wilson with her. They are there now, and report says that the courtship is going on as merrily in Paris as it did in Newport.

Miss Wilson is 26, and her papa, Richard T. Wilson, is worth about $6,000,000. He has made some remarkably advantageous marriages for his three other children, and bids fair to get a Vanderbilt as well as a Goelet for a son-in-law. His son married Miss Carrie Astor. Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt is said to be determind to break off the proposed match, and in the event of his failing to do this his son may find that instead of inheriting the bulk of his father's $100,000,000 fortune, he will have to struggle along on the $20,000 a year income which he now enjoys in his own right.

William K. Vanderbilt, who has been left free to wed again, is said to be casting sheep's eyes in the direction of Miss Amy Bend, a young woman who has been a reigning belle in exclusive society circles for a number of years. In this case it is said that the rest of the Vanderbilt family are entirely satisfied with his choice. Miss Bend was at one time reported to be engaged to John Jacob Astor, but he married Miss Willing, and the gossips admitted that they were mistaken.

An Irish Patriarch.

Dennis Kourolee, who died in Ireland in 1892, was the father of 48 children. He had been married seven times. On the day of the old man's death he had 41 living children, 336 grandchildren and 944 great-grandchildren. Over 1,000 of his relatives attended the funeral.

BUT THEY DID FIGHT.

A RECORD BREAKING REGIMENT—THE FORTIETH NEW YORK VOLUNTEERS.

Formed From the Leavings of Recruiting Camps and Disbanded Commands—Under Gallant Leaders It Won a High Place on the Roll of Honor.

[Copyright, 1896, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

ARMY traditions hold to the idea that a homogeneous body of men is the best unit for fighting. Various methods are advocated to this end. In some armies regiments are kept up by constant recruiting of the companies, so that the seasoned veterans are in the majority and give stability to the organization. Again, it is believed that regiments composed of men of congenial habits, whose life experiences have been similar, are the ones to make a good record. Much depends on whether the army is a standing one or composed of volunteers. In the former soldiering becomes a profession, and a good soldier is all right amid any surroundings. Among volunteers experience proves that it is all a matter of chance. In the civil war state emulation had much to do in arousing manly pride. Again, regiments raised in rural districts vied with those from the large cities and those from the cultured east with the battalions gathered from the rugged west.

This one idea, however, prevailed to the end—namely, that it was sufficient excuse for a poor regiment to be made up of all sorts of men. Failure was the only result expected. If that was the rule, so much the more credit for exceptional cases. The Fortieth New York was such a regiment. It was made up of four companies of New York volunteers, who were left over in recruiting for the 38 regiments of two years' troops in 1861; four from Massachusetts and two from Pennsylvania.

It so happened also that the regiment was not recruited in the field in the usual way. Its battle losses were made good by transferring to it whole companies from organizations which, for various reasons, had been disbanded. To make room for these the original companies were consolidated, and the transferred companies took their places. At one swoop five companies were added in 1863, making half the regiment new. During its four years of service seven companies were added in this manner, coming from six different organizations. Starting with companies from three states and recruited by the fusion of strange companies, the Fortieth New York resembled rather a bundle of sticks than a compact unit. A regiment of nondescripts was the best that a military man would say for the new candidate. It was for the nondescripts to prove that they could fight, and prove it they did. The crack fighting regiment of New York was the Sixty-ninth, composed of men of the same blood, hailing from the same city, and, in fact, held together by the strongest ties, for the Sixty-ninth was an old English hating militia regiment. The Fortieth led the Hibernians a hard race and came in second, as its battle losses show.

Army theorists also say it all depends on the leader how a regiment turns out. A good regiment is all the better for being well led and a poor regiment with a good leader is an anomaly. Either the regiment ceases to be a poor one or the leader dies in trying to reform it. The Fortieth went into its first fight under a good leader. The battle was Fair Oaks, the field where Kearny told his colonels to "go in" anywhere, for there was "lovely fighting along the whole line."

The leader of the Fortieth, which was under Kearny, found the fighting without asking for points. Any born leader could do that at Fair Oaks, and Lieutenant Colonel Thomas W. Egan was a fighting man. Soon after Egan's death in New York city some years ago I was present at a little gathering of soldiers in the reception room of General Sickles. There was an impromptu talk upon this very topic of good fighting stuff. General Sickles called over the roll of some of New York's soldiers, not the high commanders, but those who in battle touched elbows with the fighting masses. After naming three or four he said: "And Tom Egan. Poor Tom! But he was a splendid soldier!" Egan began his career as captain of one of the four New York companies that went into the Fortieth in 1861. In 1864 he wore a star and commanded a division in the Army of the Potomac.

At Fair Oaks Colonel Egan took his place in the front line with five companies, numbering 231 men. The remainder of the regiment was on picket duty. When the ball opened, there was a mixing up of Kearny's and Hooker's men, and neither dare fire for fear of hitting friends. The Confederates seized the advantage and poured out of a strip of woods upon the line held by the Fortieth. Not stopping for orders, Egan called on his men to follow and dashed into the enemy, giving him the cold steel. The Confederates fell back to the woods, and from there rained bullets upon the boys in blue, but the line didn't halt, although the men fell in rows. With tremendous cheers the survivors pressed on and drove the enemy from the woods. The colors led the charge, and Corporal Greeves planted his flag far beyond the woods in defiance of the enemy. Every member of the color guard was killed or wounded, and 96 soldiers fell in that brief charge.

The Fortieth came out of the battles on the peninsula in 1862 with about 400 men in the ranks, having lost over 100 in battle. In the battles at second Bull Run and Fredericksburg within that year of fighting it lost over 200 more, making a total of over 50 per cent fallen on the field. It was not engaged at Antietam, having been retained at Washington to hold the capital against Lee's attack.

The action at Fredericksburg, where the Fortieth distinguished itself, was almost a repetition of the Fair Oaks episode. Birney's division, formerly Kearny's, stood in reserve to Meade's Pennsylvanians when they charged the heights at Hamilton's Crossing. Meade's men were hurled back by Stonewall Jackson's soldiers, who streamed out of the woods in hot pursuit.

In order to stop the pursuers of the beaten troops before they should reach the reserve batteries the Fortieth and Thirty-eighth New York were ordered to charge. An open field lay between them and the enemy, and it was swept by fire from the left and front. Men fell at every step, and half way across the field the charging column was brought to a halt by two parallel ditches about five feet in depth. A mob of panic stricken soldiers came back from the front, holding up their hands as a warning to the New Yorkers of what they might expect should they advance into the woods. "Go back! Go back!" they cried. Already the Confederates were within 300 yards of Birney's reserve guns.

Recovering from the check at the first ditch, the Fortieth pressed on to the second and crossed it after a fierce battle. Reforming, it charged through the woods to the railway embankment, where the leading division had been repulsed. The regiment lost 19 killed and 74 wounded, nearly all of them within five minutes' time.

Gettysburg was the next great battle where the Fortieth came to close quarters with the enemy. Meanwhile its ranks had been strengthened by five companies formed out of the three years' recruits of the Thirty-eighth New York, a two years' regiment that had served its term.

Colonel Egan still led the Fortieth, which was in De Trobriand's brigade, Birney's division and Sickles' corps. When the attack was sprung upon Sickles by Longstreet's column on the second day, the regiment lay west of the Wheatfield, between "Devil's Den" and the Peach Orchard. Longstreet began his attack at the Peach Orchard, but the storm of battle rolled along the line toward Round Top. Hood's division assailed the line held by Birney.

On a high point of ground adjoining "Devil's Den," Captain Smith's Fourth New York battery had been posted to guard the pass through the valley of Plum Run. Ward's brigade supported Smith's guns. The elevated position of Smith's pieces enabled him to fire in three directions upon Hood's battalions. To seize the pieces was their first aim. The center of Hood's column rushed forward to "Devil's Den," and Smith and Ward called for help. The Fortieth marched across the Wheatfield, first reaching Smith's right section. Smith was fighting right, left and front, section by section and piece by piece. Two of his guns had been taken, and he begged Colonel Egan to save the rest. Ward was already getting the worst of it in a fight with Benning's Confederate brigade, which had stolen up among the rocks of "Devil's Den."

Egan called upon his men to charge, and they plunged through the morass of Plum Run, sinking in the mire up to their knees. The Confederates fell back, but only to gain new vantage ground among the rocks. Ward had been driven back, and Egan found his regiment alone exposed to a double crossfire. Every spur and knoll and towering rock of "Devil's Den" held its sharpshooting graycoat, and there was no other course for the Fortieth but a retrograde under fire.

In getting back across the Wheatfield the regiment suffered terrible slaughter, but it rallied bravely on the farther border and once more faced the enemy. The adjutant, lieutenant colonel, 3 line officers and 150 men fell in that short struggle.

In the reorganization of the army before the campaign opened in 1864 the Fortieth was transfered to Hancock's corps. Colonel Egan still led the regiment. In that terrible battle waged on May 6 for the possession of the Plank road in the Wilderness the regiment lost 176 men killed and wounded. It fought 20 bloody battles and scored a roll of 238 killed in action, besides over 700 wounded who recovered.

Colonel Egan was promoted to brigadier general during the campaign to Richmond, but fortune favored his old regiment so far as to leave it under his command to the end. In the last battle ever fought by General Hancock, Egan distinguished himself and all his following by a deed which made him worthy of the eulogy pronounced by General Sickles. Hancock's corps was surrounded at Hatcher's run, and a column of the enemy broke through the line, getting in rear of Egan's brigade. With the instinct of a soldier Egan gave the order, "About face!" charged the intruders and saved the day.

Plans For a Spacious, Artistic and Convenient Modern Dwelling.

[Copyright, 1896, by George Palliser.]

It is not every man who understands how to go about the erection of a home. Many men lose sight of the general fitness of things by reason of their own egotism. They think that they know it all on every subject, and especially so do they think that they know most about the wants and needs of themselves in a home. Such men always liken themselves in my mind to a steam engine running with a full head of steam, but with the governor attachments misplaced or disconnected. They go ahead without any knowledge of their real ability, and can only realize their weakness when their machinery breaks down and the race is ended disastrously to them. Let every man stick to his trade, sir. This is a good motto all round. Any man who is busily engaged in doing one thing gets to know a good deal about that subject by his experience, and it is this experience that is valuable, and thus every man becomes a specialist in his chosen work. The carpenter who is used to building frame houses is by far the best man to trust to build one—far better than he who only knows city work, where brickwork is the rule. It is policy in all building operations to get tried men and not make the erection of your house an experiment either for yourself or for any one else. To build well you must have a good builder; to build economically you want a good architect to make construction easy, simple and so the builders will see at a glance the completed work and how they must get it to that point. To build an artistic, imposing and attractive house does not mean a lot of elaborate detail or nonsensical work, but it means thought and reason applied to science in the art of building, whereby the greatest degree of utility in plan, the best artistic appearance and the exact fitness of things is fully expressed. This only is obtained from experience and education, coupled with taste and the ability to think and reason it out to the end in view.

The design here illustrated is the result of thought and reason and gives an excellent plan on the colonial order. It has spacious rooms and halls, good back stairs, and on the first and second floors every comfort and convenience is carefully worked in. The conservatory and balcony from dining room are features. The house is 38 feet front and 48 feet over all, was designed for a sidehill lot running down from the street, is a frame house, sheathed, papered, shingled on second story, and gives two or three good attic rooms. It is as complete and convenient a house as any one could desire.

Improvements In Plumbing Goods.

A reasoning man does nothing without a cause, the cause leads to effect, and the effect is that which carries out his ideal and the best counterpart of what his reasoning powers have led him up to. One of the principal things that conduce to the comfort and convenience of mankind is the habitation and the results of science, art and invention that are contained therein. These latter improvements for the comforts of mankind have been very numerous the past few years, and today it costs no more to utilize these improvements and inventions than it did a few years ago to get along without them. One of the most marked improvements relates to sanitary matters in plumbing goods and fixtures. This is a line that gives longer life and better health to the inmates and also adds much to the artistic appearance of the home. Another has been in heating and cooking apparatus, and while the improvements have been going on the prices have been correspondingly reduced. The improvements in interior finish and decorations have also kept pace, and beautiful interiors are now the rule and not the exception. Simplicity and dignity have placed their stamp on external lines, and taste and refinement are fast giving way to old time vulgarity. This result has been brought about by thought and reason, and it is due to the thinking architects that this change exists and is working out itself in such good form.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC —AND— Stomach and Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the proprietors and manufacturers of the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by a few of the most learned physicians, who have not brought its merits and value to the knowledge of the general public

This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, and diseases of the general nervous system. It is also of the greatest value in the cure of all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the great nervine tonic qualities which it possesses, and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body, and as a great renewer of a broken-down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the lungs than any consumption remedy ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic, almost constantly, for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous derangement.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.
To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
DEAR SIRS,—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of, but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and after using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If everyone knew the value of this remedy as I do you would be unable to supply the demand.
J. A. HARPER, Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

REBECCA WILKINSON, of Brownsvalley, Ind., says: "I had been in a distressed condition for three years from Nervousness, Weakness of the Stomach, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, until my health was gone. I had been doctoring constantly, with no relief. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which done me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever did in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy; a few bottles of it has cured me completely. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITAS' DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus' Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus' Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, and for all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health, from whatever cause.

JOHN T. MISH.

State of Indiana, Montgomery County, } ss:

Subscribed and sworn to before me this June 22, 1887.
CHAS. W. WRIGHT, Notary Public.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, indigestion, nervous prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I do not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the NERVES. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Wedding and Reception.

A most solemn, impressive and yet happy event it was that occurred on the evening of Feb. 27, 1896, in which Mr. and Mrs. Oregon Thompson, at their home near Big Island, gave their most estimable and only daughter, Leoria B., to be joined in holy wedlock with Harry Shepherd, of near Marion.

At precisely 7 o'clock, attended by Burt Shepherd, brother of the groom, as best man, and Annie Bunford as bridesmaid, the bridal party entered the parlor, filled with invited guests. Miss Della Coon presided at the organ. Just as the last sweet strains seemed to melt away Rev. Wm. M. Haines, of Marysville, Ohio, a former pastor, pronounced the beautiful ceremony of the M. E. church that made this happy couple husband and wife.

After congratulations the guests repaired to the dining hall where a most bountiful repast had been prepared—such as Mrs. Thompson is noted for.

NONAGENARIAN DEAD.

Mrs. Katherine Hagerty Dies at the Age of Ninety.

Katherine Hagerty, mother of Cornelius Hagerty, died at the son's home, five miles west of the city, at about 4 o'clock this morning. Her death was caused by the infirmities of old age. Mrs. Hagerty was ninety years of age and had only been ill four weeks. She came to this country from England twenty-seven years ago, and came to this county to reside with her son, her husband having died prior to that time.

She had two children living, the son with whom she resided, and another living in New York. In the many years that Mrs. Hagerty lived in this county she became very well acquainted and made many friends. She enjoyed comparatively good health until a month ago, when she was suddenly stricken. Her age made her recovery impossible.

Marshal Blain was not obliged to notify the owners of machines personally, but thought it best, so that all might understand the law in regard to the legal publication of the ordinance.

There has been much anxiety among the owners of the machines in regard to the manner that would be adopted to remove the same, and many did not know but what they had to be notified in person before they would be obliged to move the machines. There are only a few towns in this vicinity where slot machines are allowed.
